We hope that you found your consultation with us helpful. I understand that you will be anxious to learn the results any tests that are ordered. Please be aware that tests results will not be available to you until your follow up appointment. The exception will be if there is a result we need to act upon right away. Please understand that many tests will not have a simple “normal” or “abnormal answer; instead a conversation with a provider will be needed to adequately explain results. Given the complex nature of our patient population, there simply is not time to provide all these discussions between appointments. I understand this can produce anxiety and am sorry.

Sincerely,

David Saperstein, MD
